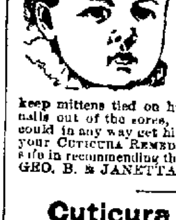
BAD ECZEMA ON BABY

Head one Solid Sore. Itching Awful. Had to Tie His Hands to Cradle. Cured by Cuticura.



Our little boy broke out on his head with a bad form of eczema, when he was four months old. We tried three doctors, but they did not help him. We then used your three CUTICURA REMEDIES, and after using them eleven weeks exactly according to directions, he began to steadily improve, and after the use of them for seven months his head was entirely well. When we began using it his head was a solid sore from the crown to his eyebrows. It was also all over his ears, most of his face, and small places on different parts of his body. There were sixteen weeks that we had to keep his hands tied to the cradle and hold them when he was taken up; and had to keep mittens tied on his hands to keep his finger-nails out of the sores, as he would scratch if he could in any way get his hands loose. We know your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him. We feel safe in recommending them to others.

AN OLD THANKSGIVING.

If turkey failed and beef was tough,
With toil and debt increasing,
We sighed not, but we ate enough,
And laughed because the times were rough
And care's demands unceasing.

Beyond the clouds the future stood
With gifts of joy or sorrow,
We trusted God to make them good
And waited still, in thankful mood,
The dawning of the morrow.

"Things might be worse," the father said,
"Hope darkened more," said mother;
"The household memories were not dead,
The household angels had not fled,
God saved us to each other."

And so that old Thanksgiving Day,
In doubt and darkness rising,
Was full of praise, and love's sweet way
Held over all its gentle sway,
Our souls in joy baptising.

Oh! not from pleasure's idle reign,
Nor luxury's soft condition,
Uprises praise that sweetens pain
And faith that ripens souls like grain
For harvest fields elysian.

Thanksgiving, in the humble home
Where toil and care are neighbors,
Brings down, somehow, from kingdom come,
A peace that lighten's sorrow's sum
And blesses rudest labors.

Despise no day of little things,
No joy in lowly station;
For toilers may be more than kings
To Him who giveth prayer its wings
And faith its coronation.

And in the happy years that lie
Beyond the shadowy river,
The souls that rather sing than sigh
May still be blessed and gladdened by
Thanksgiving days forever.

IVY'S MISTAKE.

A STORY OF THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving eve in the old Sunderland homestead, and from cellar to garret floated delicious odors of roasting turkey, of chickens done to a tender crisp in their own rich juices, and of a goodly array of pies of all denominations—such pies, teeming with all the odors of Araby the blest, as had won dear, motherly Mrs. Sunderland an enviable reputation through all the region round about.

And flitting busily at her mother's side, in the great, clean, shining kitchen, with light feet and the very daintiest, deftest little hands in all the world, was the blooming Ivy—"sole daughter of her house and heart."

"There, mother," she said, placing a gigantic plum cake on the table with a triumphant flourish, "that's the last! The baking is done, thank goodness, and now I attack the parlor."

"I wouldn't to-night, dear," said Mrs. Sunderland. "You'll tire yourself out. There'll be plenty of time in the morning."

"Oh, no, mother. I promised to be at church early, to practice the new anthem. They all declare they can't get along without me. And I thought if I could snatch an hour some time between now and then that I'd finish off my blue silk—it only needs a stitch or two. Julia Hunt said she might be over after dinner and bring her cousin with her. She's from the city, you know, and so stylish. And then," she added, with a rather overdone attempt at carelessness, "it's possible Joe Dalton may be here in the evening."

"H'm' Joe Dalton," said Mrs. Sunderland, a little surprised, but too much absorbed in her contemplation of the cake to pay strict attention to less important matters. "And when did you hear from him?"

"Oh, not since he left in the summer. But he told me then that he intended to pass Thanksgiving at the 'Squire's, and that if he did he'd give us a call. But really I must begin at the parlor."

And into the parlor she went, a curiously-happy light on her face, while she dusted the quaint old spindle-legged piano, and polished the mirror between the windows, and rubbed the brass fire-dogs till they shown again. Then she brought out long wreaths of fragrant ground pine and knots of scarlet leaves, and garlanded the old family portraits, and filled vases and baskets, till the old room was sweet and glowing as the bower of a forest queen.

Perhaps it was all to please Julia Hunt and her city cousin, but I know that all the while before Ivy's happy eyes were floating memories of Joe Dalton's admiring looks when one day last summer she decorated the room with wild clematis vines, and still in her ears were ringing his praises of what he called her "exquisite artistic instincts."

Suddenly the whistle of the evening train was heard, and away went the tired feet, twinkling up three flights of stairs to the attic, where Ivy coddled down in the window commanding a view of the turn in the road by which the 'Squire's open wagon must pass on its way home from the depot. Yes, sure enough, there came the wagon behind the pair of high-stepping bays. Ivy could distinguish the 'Squire's portly figure on the front seat, beside the coachman, and behind was a slender form that Ivy's beating heart told her was Joe. But a little half-jealous pang shot through that same heart as she saw that a lady, evidently young, sat beside him, and marked the devoted air with which he leaned toward her, one arm extended behind her on the back of the seat, the other pointing here and there, as though drawing her attention to the different beauties of the landscape.

"Some cousin, I suppose," she said to herself, as she went slowly down the stairs to her own room. The apron must be removed, the silky braids smoothed with extra care, and the plain linen collar replaced with frills of dainty lace. Then from its little sandal-wood box Ivy drew forth a slender chain and locket, the sole ornament she possessed, and settled it among the frills with a satisfied smile. Tender brown eyes, crimson lips, a low, white forehead framed in silken curls—it certainly was a pretty picture that looked back at her from the glass. In spite of fatigue Ivy was looking her prettiest and knew it, and was so glad, for who could tell but that he might come over that very night?

However, she said nothing to her mother of any such expectation. But as soon as tea was over, with some strip of fancy work, she drew her own little rocker before the wood fire on the sitting-room hearth, and while her swift fingers evolved the mysteries of satin stitch, point and wheels, her happy thoughts went straying over all that brief, bright month when Joe Dalton had spent his summer vacation in Redleaf, and every spare moment of it in close vicinity to the Sunderland farmhouse.

Joe, be it known, was the 'Squire's step-son. Only the year before the 'Squire had married a dashing, though elderly widow from the city, with two grown-up sons. One of them Ivy had never seen, but Joe had been in the habit of paying frequent flying visits from the city, where he resided, and, as report said, was amassing a fortune fairly fabulous for so young a man.

When the summer came, and he spent a whole month at the 'Squire's, he had singled out Ivy from the whole bevy of rustic beauties, and devoted himself to her with a persistence that soon set every gossip's tongue in motion.

What a delightful month it was! How they had picnicked and frolicked together through the long summer days, and strolled through dewy lanes in the dreamy twilight, and rowed on moonlit nights down the shining river! And then that last scene of all! Ivy's cheeks glowed at the remembrance of it.

She had gone down the garden path with him to the little gate, and there, under the shadow of the elms, and hidden from the house by a clump of syringa bushes, they had somehow found saying good-bye a very lingering transaction indeed. Ivy remembered how he had held her hand in his tight clasp till all the warm blood came billowing up over cheek and brow, and her eyes fell beneath his ardent gaze. Then, almost before she knew it, an arm had stolen around her waist, a pair of warm lips were pressed closely, lingeringly on her own.

"Good-bye till Thanksgiving," he laughed, and was off before she could chide him.

He hadn't told her in just so many words that he loved her, but how could she doubt it? Hadn't every look and act declared it over and over during that happy vacation time? And then, if he didn't love her, why that last tender caress speaking volumes to her answering heart?

The morning came—Thanksgiving morning—with floods of golden sunlight, with air so crisp and bracing that it made one's blood tingle just to breathe it. Ivy made haste to finish her light morning tasks, and then daintily arrayed herself for church. She was to walk. It was only a mile, and the choir had arranged to come early and practice their anthem once more before service began.

With a light step she tripped down the narrow path. But at the little gate she stopped suddenly, trying to check a frown; for there, under the elm, behind the leafless syringa bushes, stood Alvira Simms, the village dressmaker, evidently lying in wait to walk to the church with her, and Miss Simms was one of Ivy's pet aversions. Many's the time she and Joe had amused themselves at the expense of those cork-screw curls and affected ways and tones of vinegar sourness.

"Good-morning," simpered Miss Alvira. "I thought likely you'd be coming along, so I walked slow on purpose to see it I couldn't have the pleasure of your company to church. It's a beautiful morning?"

"Beautiful," said Ivy, briefly, and she looked curiously at Miss Simms, as if to devine the cause of this sudden desire for her society, for they were usually as distant as the poles. She fancied an unusually malicious twinkle lurking in the seamstress' snaky black eyes.

"I suppose you've heard the news?" with a sharp side glance and an air of immense importance.

"News? No, I've heard no news worth mentioning," returned Ivy, in her most indifferent tones.

"Well, I don't know as you'll consider this worth mentioning," retorted Alvira bridling up. "It's about Mr. Dalton—Joe Dalton, you know. But you used to be so very intimate with him that I thought herhaps it might interest you to know." She paused and looked Ivy full in the face. "He's married!" she said, and there was a hateful, cruel light in her mean face as she watched the effect of her words.

"Married!" echoed Ivy, with wide, startled eyes. "I don't believe it!" she added, bluntly, in her bewilderment forgetting her politeness.

"Oh, very well," sniffed Miss Alvira, her nose in the air, as she turned to go.

"Excuse me," stammered Ivy, putting out her hand to detain her. "I—I thought you must have been misinformed. How did you hear.

"Oh," said Miss Simms, softening, only too glad of the chance to go over the details. "I didn't hear at all—I saw! I was up at the 'Squire's when he brought her home. The sewing-room door was open, and I saw them come into the hall together. Then his mother and the 'Squire ran out, and I heard him introduce her as their new daughter. Then, in the midst of the laughing and kissing and handshaking some one closed the door, to prevent the dressmaker from witnessing their family joys, I suppose."

Poor Ivy! She turned faint and sick as the fatal truth forced itself upon her. Her face grew white as death, and there was a stony look of misery in the soft eye that would have melted a less cruel heart than that of the woman beside her. But in the midst of her misery pride came to her aid. One thing she was resolved upon—no one should ever suspect her anguish; no one should ever say that she wore the willow for gay Joe Dalton.

How she accomplished the rest of the distance to church she never knew. She had a confused remembrance that she turned the subject with some commonplace remarks—that she discussed the weather, the fall styles, the new minister, with now and then a laugh or careless jest, in much her usual fashion, till they parted at the church door, and Ivy mechanically ascended the gallery stairs and took her place among the "singers' seats."

"Why, Ivy Sunderland!" chorused the girls; "what is the matter? You're as white as a sheet, and your eyes—why, girls, just look at her eyes!"

"There, girls," said Ivy, with a faint smile, "please don't talk to me; I've got a horrible headache." Which was true enough, but heartache would have been truer.

So the kind-hearted creatures bustled about and brought her a glass of water and a battered old palm-leaf fan from a dusty closet, and mercifully left her at peace. But for once the soaring soprano was silent, and the anthem obliged to pursue its winding way without her aid, while she sat on one side idly watching the congregation drifting in, one by one, with their shining holiday faces.

By-and-bye came a firm, light tread up the aisle, and Ivy closed her eyes with a sickening shudder. When she opened them again Joe Dalton stood at the head of their pew, ushering in a tiny, elegant creature in rustling, purple silks, a cloud of fluffy blonde hair above a childish face, and eyes like great soft violets. He faced the choir for an instant, and, as his eyes met Ivy's, the whole face lit up with a gleam of dark eyes and a flash of dazzling teeth beneath his brown mustache.

But the smile faded to a look of half-indignant surprise as Ivy looked straight on and beyond him without the slightest sign of recognition, and he settled himself with that impatient shake of the broad shoulders which Ivy knew so well.

Long after service she lingered in the gallery to avoid all chance of meeting him, and then slowly made her way home, a curious numb feeling at her heart, a strange blur and chill over the sunny autumn landscape and in the crisp, golden air.

But when she reached home she was even more gay and cordial than usual in her greetings of the numerous aunts, uncles and young fry of cousins who had assembled there during the morning; and all that afternoon her laugh was the loudest, her jest the wildest among all that hilarious group. A bright spot burned on either cheek and there was a feverish light in her eyes; but no one knew that her hands and feet were like ice, that the wild gayety came from an excitement that had just escaped delirium. And when Julia Hunt and her cousin called they found her radiant in the blue silk, and ready to discuss "the news," which, thanks to Miss Simms, was at present briskly circulating from one end of Redleaf to the other.

So through the long twilight they sat in the firelight, cracking nuts and jokes indiscriminately, pounding their thumbs and screaming with alternate pain and laughter, and chattering through it all like a convention of hilarious magpies.

Then, as the young moon looked in at the western windows, Miss Hunt declared, jumping up, that they must go; there was to be a dance a mile away, at which they were due in an hour, and a pair of "somebodies" no doubt awaiting impatiently at the paternal mansion at this very moment for their return.

So Ivy, throwing her scarlet cloak around her shoulders and pulling the hood over her curls—a lovely, grown up Red Riding Hood—ran down to the gate with them to see them off, in sociable country fashion, and after a shower of girl kisses on both sides stood watching them as they tripped up the road in the weird mingling of twilight and moonlight which hung over the world.

Standing on one side, peering up the road with intent eyes, absorbed in her own thoughts, she did not hear the footsteps that stole softly along the grass bordering of the roadside walk. The next moment a strong arm clasped her, a pair of daring lips snatched a kiss.

"Watching for me, Ivy?" cried Joe Dalton, triumphantly.

"Mr. Dalton! How dare you! Let me go, sir!" exclaimed Ivy, breaking away from him with blazing eyes and face shining white with anger in the faint light.

"Whew!" ejaculated Joe, stepping back a pace. "It seems to me that you have changed mightily in three short months. Have you forgotten"—

"I have forgotten nothing, sir," burst out Ivy, in tones of suppressed passion. "It is you who have forgotten—forgotten, among other things, the respect which every gentleman owes to a lady."

"Ivy—Miss Sunderland, what is the meaning of this? What has happened that you should break off our friendship?"

"What has happened, indeed!" echoed Ivy, scornfully. "Mr. Dalton, have you so low an opinion of me as to suppose that to me marriage is no impediment to such liberties as you have just insulted me by taking?"

"Married!" cried Joe. "So you are married, Ivy. And I to know nothing about it! Why did no one tell me? Oh! Ivy, Ivy, how could—"

"What are you saying, Mr. Dalton? I am not married; it is you—you!"

Here she broke down, her over wrought mood gave way, and she burst into hysterical sobs.

"Ivy, Ivy!" cried Joe, "I am not married. Who ever told you so?" and he caught the shuddering, trembling form in his arms, and drew the head down on his bosom. "So that is the meaning of all this, your averted look this morning, and all. I thought afterward that perhaps you did not see me. Now, who told you such an absurd story? I insist upon knowing."

"Miss—Miss Simms," faltered Ivy, as the sobs died away.

"Alvira! Well, I declare! And you believed her?"

"She—she said that she saw her last night—that you introduced her to your mother as her new daughter; and then you were at church with her this morning."

"Oh, that meddlesome old maid!" ejaculated Joe; "to think she should have made you suffer all this, my little clinging vine. Never mind, love, we'll cut her acquaintance when we're married."

"But, Joe," said Ivy, affecting not to hear the last remark, "who is the lady? Your cousin? Do you know, I believe I'm half jealous of her?"

"Jealous! well, you won't be so long. That lady is my mother's new daughter, Ivy. She is my brother Dick's lovely little wife, whom my mother had never seen before. They arrived in New York last night from New Orleans, and as Dick could not come out till the midnight train, and Edith was anxious to get home as soon as possible, I acted as her most dutiful escort.

And Ivy, although she began her Thanksgiving rather late in the day, made up in intensity what was lacking in length of time.

A FRENCH paper tells of a new process of tanning by electricity, which, it says, is being used on the skins of stray dogs gathered into the Paris pound. The electric system, it is alleged, transforms the skin into leather in three or four days, against the six or eight months required by the ordinary way. It is chiefly used for ladies' fine shoes, and is notable for soft and delicate qualities.

A Word in Season about Holiday Gifts.

HANDKERCHIEF BAGS AND WORK BAGS.

What to do for Christmas is the problem that will soon be filling the minds of women, and this problem will require speedy solution if one wishes to enjoy to the utmost the holiday season. There is nothing more tiresome than to be obliged at the last minute to rush around and buy one's gifts, spending more than one can well afford, when by the exercise of a little forethought money and strength can be saved. Begin in time; plan your work; look over your materials in hand; buy judiciously, and then go to work and make—bags, for they never come amiss. No matter how many one has, a new one is always acceptable.

One pretty bag, a suitable present for a child or its mother, is to be used for handkerchiefs and is made as follows: Cut two round pieces of pasteboard about seven inches in diameter and cut wadding the exact size, using two layers for the inside of the bag. Upon the wadding sprinkle sachet powder. Then lay the disks of wadding upon one of the pieces of pasteboard and hold them in place by covering the circle with cheese cloth. Cover the other circle with pale pink satin, of which the bag is made. This pink satin is very delicate looking when the white roses (procured at a milliner's) encircle it.

The strip (just long enough to go around the circle) is turned over at the top to form a hem, at the lower edge of which a casing should be made by stitching the hem around twice on the machine, using pale pink sewing silk. In the casing put two white silk cords to draw up the bag. Then sew the strip to the lower pasteboard used for the bottom and afterward insert the scented circle, catching it in place with invisible stitches. Turning it right side out again, catch the roses all around the base of the bag, and the bag is done. I don't think any of my readers have a lady friend who would not be pleased to receive one of these dainty handkerchief bags.

Cut a round piece of wood six inches in diameter and cover one side with a piece of coarse linen, in the center of which embroider a monogram or initial in satin stitch, with yellow silk; the back of the board is neatly covered with the same as other material. Around one-half of the board, forming a semicircle, are a number of small brass screw hooks about an inch apart, from which hang small bags, each 4 by 5 inches and prettily worked in odd letters with yellow silk, white thread, linen thread, colored thread, silk twist, pearl buttons, hooks and eyes or anything you desire. In each bag put a drawing cord of silk. Hang the board by a large brass ring, hidden under a huge bow of yellow ribbon at the top. These bags are very convenient, and may be made of almost any material.

For a fanbag purchase one yard and a half of No. 9 ribbon. Cut this in two and join lengthwise by a double row of small brass rings covered with embroidery silk the color of the ribbon. A single row of these rings borders each of the inner edges of the ribbon to within two inches of the ends of the ribbon which are to be fringed. This is doubled in the center and the sides joined. Ribbons are run through the rings at the top from either side, leaving them long enough to slipover the arm.

Serviceable and pretty little work bags are made by using for a foundation one of the small oblong baskets—about 4 by 6 inches—to be found at almost any shop where Japanese goods are kept. For the upper part of the bag procure two yards of dark yellow ribbon, No. 9, and two yards of the same color, a few shades lighter. Then cut these in twelve strips of equal length and join altogether. After they are all joined a hem 2½ inches deep is turned and finished with two rows of stitching one inch apart. The other edge is finished with a very narrow hem and fastened to the basket with invisible stitches. Ribbons run through the casing finish the bag.

Another pretty bag is made of two pieces of chamois, each 5 by 6 inches, which are painted around the edges with clover blossoms and leaves. The designs on the two pieces should be similar, but not exactly the same. A piece of india or china silk, matching the green of the clover leaf, four inches wide and one yard long, is gathered and connects the two pieces of chamois along the sides and across the bottom as a puff. A straight piece of silk six inches deep and the width of the bag is sewed to the bag. A hem two inches deep is turned with two rows of stitching for the ribbons which are green, matching the silk.

Still another lovely bag is made of two shades of No. 12 old rose satin ribbon, one and two-thirds of a yard of each being used. The ribbons are cut into strips of ten inches and oversewed together, alternating the light and the dark. A bottom for the bag is made by covering a round piece of pasteboard with wadding sprinkled with sachet powder, and then covering both sides with old rose silk. The ribbon is narrowly hemmed on one side and sewed to the pasteboard. The top is hemmed and has a wide ruffle of soft lace and draw strings of narrow ribbon.

ACCORDING to a statement of a French chemist oats contain twice as much mineral principles to form and grow bones of the animal as Indian corn. It is 12 to 14 per cent. richer in protein—that is to say, in matter that makes muscle and other tissues. Besides that, oats contain a principle that has been ignored and produces high class horses instead of breeding cheap little horses and mules that meet the competition of millions of western ponies in our own Western states and millions of surplus Russian ponies and Spanish ponies from South America.—Live Stock Journal.

HE WANTED THE PIG.—"Fresh doughnuts—the kind mother used to make!" bawled a man going through the cars.

"Give me some! quick! A whole lot," said one of the passengers, as he stopped the vender; "if they are anything like the doughnuts my mother used to make I can't get enough of 'em. I just love doughnuts!"

A little while later he sat buried in meditation.

"Feeling sentimental, old man?" asked one of the crowd.

"Not much," answered the man who loved doughnuts, "I was just wishing I could get hold of the pig that furnished the lard those doughnuts were cooked in. I would like to feed him those that are left, so I would."—Detroit Free Press.

Weather Lore of the Sun.

Among the people of all countries and ages, says the St. Louis Republic, the sun's redness on rising or setting has always been regarded as ominous. These notions have furnished material for many proverbs. An old English adage informs us that—

If red the sun begins his race,
Be sure that rain will fall apace.

Even Christ alludes to the same popular idea of the sun's color and its relation to wet or dry weather, where he says (Matthew xvi., 1, 3): "When it is evening, ye say, It will be clear weather; for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day; for the sky is red and lowering." It may be remembered, too, how graphically Shakespeare puts forth this same proverb in his "Venus and Adonis":

Like a red morn, that ever yet betokened
Wreck to the seamen, tempest to the fields,
Sorrow to the shepherd, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to the herdsmen and to herds.

If we turn to European observations we find that the Italians say: "If the morn be red, rain is at hand," and, again, "If the sky be red when the morning star is shining, there will be rain during the week." As is well known, however, a red sunset is just as propitious as a red rising is unlucky—"a red sky at night being a shepherd's delight," and according to a saying very popular when the writer was a child—

Evening red, morning gray,
Sends the traveler on his way.

In Germany it is commonly said that "a red sunset and a gray rising sets the pilgrim a-walking." At Malto the stable boy will tell you that "a red sunset says: 'Get your horse ready for to-morrow.'" In "Richard III," Shakespeare gives us the same proverb in different words:

The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.

Indeed, there are numerous proverbs on this subject, all to the same purpose, an ancient Scotch rhyme being as follows:

The evening red and the morning gray
Is a sign of a bright and cheery day;
Evening gray and morning red—
Put on your hat or you'll wet your head.

Some Clever Catches.

A young lady was once talking with a very young and very smart man, who was inclined to air his knowledge of the languages a little beyond what she felt that modesty required. She therefore said to him, with an air of deference to his superior attainments.

"You are a Latin scholar. I wish you would tell me how to pronounce the word 'so-met-i-mes.'"

The youth, with an air of kindly patronage, replied, "I have not met the word in my Latin reading, but I should have no hesitation in saying that it should be pronounced 'so-met-i-mes'" (giving it in four syllables, the accent on the second).

"Thank you for telling me," replied the girl, demurely. "I have always heard at pronounced sometimes, but if you say the other way, that must be right."

This is similar to the perhaps familiar catch of the pronunciation of "bac-kache," which will often surprise the uninitiated by proving to be only back-ache. It also reminds one of a question printed some years since, as to the way of spelling "need"—to need bread. The average person will reply "k-n-e-a-d, of course;" but the answer will be, "that is the way to spell knead dough, but not to need bread."

A young lady recently misled a family in a most heartless way. She remarked, "I had a letter to-day, and how do you imagine the little proposition 'to' was used?"

"Too," suggested mamma.

"Two," suggested papa.

"Tew," "Teu," "Tu," ventured various voices.

Lily, who was much engaged with her French lessons just then, suggested "tout," and Tom, in derision, improved upon that with "tueue," declaring that must be right in order to rhyme with "queue."

"All wrong," exclaimed the young lady, when the alphabet and their ingenuity were well exhausted.

Just then Teddy, who had been soberly absorbed in his bread-and-honey, and who was in his first term at school, and wrestling with the problem of words in two letters, raised his head, and with an air of decision and importance, gravely spelled, "T-o, to."

"Yes," cried the young lady, with a peal of laughter.

"Why," exclaimed the others, in dismayed chorus, "that is the right way to spell it!"

"Exactly," she replied; "and that is the way my correspondent spelled it. You do not suppose I correspond with persons who cannot even spell to correctly, do you?"—Harper's Young People.

THE FIRST VOLUNTEER OF THE WAR.—The first volunteer of the civil war is General E. C. Williams, of Chapman, Union township, Snyder county, Pa. His claims cannot be doubted, as the records prove him to be the first. He is also a hero of the Mexican war and helped suppress the Philadelphia riots of 1844. When the call for troops for the late war was made Governor Curtin ordered Williams to raise a force for the service, and in a short time had Camp Curtin fully officered and men for duty responded rapidly. His date of enlistment shows that he was the first volunteer of the war. The General's record is "first volunteer mustered in the United States service in the late war on the 15th day of April, 1861, in the executive chamber at Harrisburg, Pa., between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock, a. m., by Captain S. G. Simmons, United States of America, in the presence of Governor Curtin and all the heads of departments." He was mustered over two days before the Logan Guards or any of the first five companies. He is Postmaster at Chapman, and has held the office for twenty years. He is in the 73d year of his age.

BUCKLES are quite a feature in this autumn's dress arrangements. No shoes are up to date without them. They are worn on gowns arranged in various ways and as belts. There is a craze for antique silver in buckles, belts and ornaments of all kinds, and women are becoming highly educated in the matter of silver marks.—Ex.

The Colorado Desert.

One of the most gigantic irrigation schemes ever advanced in the United States is being perfected near Yuma, in that Territory. The canal is now being built, and will be 126 miles in lengh. 120 feet in width and twelve feet in depth. The water will be taken out of the east bank of the Colorado river, and will give fertility to millions of acres of land heretofore belonging to the arid waste known as the Colorado Desert. An immense volume of water comes down the Colorado at all times of the year, and there is no necessity of dams or reservoirs to hold a reserve, yet, notwithstanding the advantages, no attempt has ever been made to use it for irrigation purposes.

The land is now covered with a waste of cactus and sage brush, but everywhere water touches it it is peculiarly fertile, and especially is it adapted to the raising of tropical fruits. The Sonora orange has been tried successfully, and, though it does not grow well in Southern California, thousands of acres will be planted here. The irrigation project is in the hands of capitalists from Denver and San Francisco, and the number of men at work upon the canal now will complete it within a year. The water will not run part of the time, as in other canals, but all the time, and it will practically amount to changing the course of part of the river, from which branch ditches will lead. The scope of country to be covered by it is 126 miles long and 10 in width.

A Traveling Shoe.

An old, badly worn shoe passed through Madison, Wis., in the United States mail the other day. An old shoe with half of the sole worn off and holes in the uppers, is a rather unusual to find in the mail, but this had traveled thousands of miles, and not one cent of postage had been paid on it. There are about two hundred tags tied to the holes for lacings, and something like one hundred and fity of them have the stamps of different post offices, together with insriptions by different postal clerks.

The shoe went to Madison from Minneapolis, to Minneapolis from St. Paul, to St. Paul from Seattle, to Seattle from Portland, to Portland from San Francisco, to San Francisco from Honolulu, to Honolulu from San Francisco. It is hard to trace its course before that, but it has the stamp of any number of post offices on it, among them being those at Oakland, Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha and any number of cities in the east and some in the south.

Where it has gone from Madison is not positively known. The shoe was started from Boston by one of the postal clerks there—the first tag shows that—and there is a request that it be returned there. At St. Paul it was inscribed: "Too small for a big city. Pass it on to the village." Then it was sent to Minneapolis.

A SAVANT attempts to demonstrate, in one of our scientific magazines, that there is likely to be a scurcity of elbow room among the earth's population in the reasonably near future. He estimates the present population of the world at something less than one and a half billion. The natural increase, he concludes, will make the figure six billion two hundred years hence, and this, he declares, is the utmost limit of the earth's capacity for sustaining human life. The trouble with all these elaborate estimates and deductions, maintains the New York News, is that they are based upon the hypothesis that man must live as he lives to-day. Conditions will change as necessity crowds population. Half the people of the earth now rarely, if ever, taste meat. The dense populations of China, India, and some other countries live almost wholly on rice. Analysis shows that the banana contains all the elements essential to human life, and enough bananas can be raised on an acre of ground to supply one hundred people a year. It will be a long time before the standing-room-only placard is displayed in the world's theatre.

TOOLS USED IN BUILDING THE PYRAMIDS.—One of the most interesting exhibitions in connection with the recent Oriental Congress in London is a collection of tools used by workmen in building the Pyramids of Egypt. They were gathered and are exhibited by the illustrious Egyptologist, Flinders Patrie. These utensils indicate that ancient workmen had an astonishing acquaintance with many tools which we have been accustomed to consider essentially modern. Among the exhibits are solid and tubular corundum-tipped drills, and straight and circular saws, and chisels described as "not a bit inferior to those now used."

IOWA ranks fifth among the forty-eight States and Territories of the Union in the extent of its railroad mileage, 8444. The States which lead Iowa, are, in order, Illinois, with 10,235 miles; Pennsylvania, 8978; Kansas, 8901; Texas, 8854. The total mileage in the United States is 171,070, and of the world 383,500.

HE LOOKED MEEK.—An undersized, meek-looking man was brought up before the United States Commissioner at Atoka, I. T., charged with horse-stealing. He had several horses, but no money, and two of the brightest of Atoka's lawyers offered to help him out of his trouble, partly from sympathy. The case against him looked strong, but his meek appearance seemed to offset the evidence and he was acquitted. He gave to each of the lawyers one of his ponies as pay for their services. The lawyers put them out to pasture. The same night the little man stole back the horses and skipped from the vicinity.

The Law in Alabama.

"I am just back from Alabama," said William H. Palm, a disciple of Blackstone, to a Globe-Democrat reporter in the rotunda of the Lindell. "I went down there to practice law, but got discouraged and came back North to look for a new location. Business? Oh, yes; I had plenty of business down there, but my clients insisted on paying me in coonskins, moonlight whisky and political support. I spent three days on a case for a widow—breach of promise suit—damages, $10,000, and she sent me a crock of clabber, a peck of yams and a pair of home-knit blue socks that would fit the big-footed girl of Ohio. I didn't mind that so much as I did the cool disregard for law of the Judges before whom I was called to plead.

"I was retained to defend a young fellow charged with shooting a man at a horse race one Sunday afternoon. I proved conclusively that at the time the shooting occurred my client was attending divine service at a church half a mile distant. Three witnesses testified that they saw him there, and I thought I had established an alibi beyond the peradventure of a doubt and said so in my speech, which I felt quite sorry Daniel Webster was not present to enjoy. After I sat down the Judge took a chew of North Carolina dog-leg tobacco, put on his specs and called the defendant up before him. 'Whar was y' bawn?' he inquired. The defendant replied that he was 'bawn' four miles south-west of Smugtown, on the plantation of 'Squire Sanders. 'That settles it,' said the Judge. 'All the Yankee lawyers in Christendom couldn't convince this co't that a native o' Ole Alabamer was squatted down in a church a-singin' o' Psalms when thar was a hoss race an' free whisky only half a mile away. You docketed to go to jail until the gran' jury kin sot on your case. The man was killed at that hoss race, an' it stands t' reason that you was thar or tharabouts.'"

A Plucky Little Drummer.

A gentleman now residing in New York said that he was once a witness of a singular occurrence at a dance hall in Gunnison, Col. A smart little drummer from the East stood at the side of the hall watching the dancers through his eye-glasses, which were balanced on the edge of his nose in a rather comical manner. The drummer was attired in a nobby suit of clothes, made from a very striking pattern. He presented altogether too foppish an appearance to please the fastidious taste of the frontier roughs. The bully of the hall was waltzing with the pride of the flats, the best dancer in town. When she caught sight of the drummer she laughed in her partner's face, and as they came around again he brushed her rudely against him. Supposing that the collision was the result of carelessness, the drummer paid no particular attention to it. On the next turn, however, the bully threw his girl against the little fellow with such force as to knock his eye-glasses from his nose and nearly upset him. Biding his time the drummer placed his glasses in his pocket, and when the ruffian came around again struck out with his right swiftly, taking the bully directly under the ear and dropping him as suddenly as if he had been shot.

When the rough regained his feet, with his hand on his revolver, he found the drummer's pistol within a foot of his breast.

"You have the drop on me, pard," he exclaimed, "and I apologize. And now," he continued, "if you'll permit me to introduce you to the pride, I'm blessed if you shan't dance with her."

"I don't desire to dance," replied the drummer; "but hereafter, as heretofore, I shall always stand ready to defend my right to wear the style of garments which suits me best."

THAT it is wise to know your man before you impart unsolicited information is well shown in the following:

One of those good-natured persons who are always bent on imparting information was humiliated not long since.

A negro was seated on a rail fence in Arkansas, intently looking at the telegraph poles. A gentleman passing said,

"Watching the wires?"

"Yes, sah."

"Waiting to see a message go by, hey?"

The negro smiled and said, "Yes, sah."

The gentleman kindly told him that messages were invisible, and explained the work of the electric current to him at length. Concluding he said.

"Now you know something about it."

"Yes, sah."

"What do you work at?"

"I'm a telegraph operator at the Hazel Switch Station, sah."

POSTPONED.

Democratic Parade

IN GETTYSBURG

POSTPONED TO WEDNESDAY EVENING.

On account of the rain on Friday, the Committee in charge of the Jollification decided to postpone it until Wednesday (to-morrow) evening. The supply of fireworks for the occasion is unusually large, likely surpassing any previous display here. While the change of date has caused some inconvenience and disappointment, it is to be hoped that it will deter no one from participating on Wednesday evening. Let there be a full turn-out.

The parade will form on York and Hanover streets, with the right resting on Liberty. It will then move, starting at 7 o'clock, over the following streets in order: Up York to Chamberburg, to West, to West Middle, to Baltimore, to Steinwear Ave., to Washington, to Breckenridge, to Baltimore, to West High, to Franklin, to West Middle, to Washington, to Water, to Carlisle, to Baltimore, to East Middle, to Liberty, to York, to Globe Hotel and disband.

ARENDTSVILLE.

The Democrats of Franklin, Butler and Menallen townships will celebrate the recent victory in a parade at Arendtsville, on Saturday night, Nov. 26. Procession to form at 6½ o'clock, p. m. Several speakers will be present. All Democrats are urged to turn out and rejoice in the grand victory. By order of

COMMITTE.

FAIRFIELD.

There will be a celebration of the Democratic victory, in Fairfield, on Saturday night next. All friends of the party are invited to join us.

THE heavy pension payments this month amounting to nearly $15,000,000 and the unexpected falling off in government receipts has reduced the cash balance of the treasury to $25,650,000, nearly all of which is either in subsidiary silver or on deposit with national banks. A still further decline is expected before the end of the month. What a contrast! Four years ago when Harrison was elected President, Cleveland's Secretary of the Treasury had more than $100,000,000 of surplus in the goverment vaults.

WASHINGTON hotel-keepers say that they are already overwhelmed with applications for rooms during the inauguration ceremonies, and it is believed that the second inauguration of Mr. Cleveland will be the greatest event of the kind that the country has ever witnessed.

Pennsylvania.

There is every reason to feel satisfied with the vote of Pennsylvania in the late election. No effort whatever was made to arouse the Democracy in this state, the tariff issue was especially calculated to draw out a strong Republican vote in this greatest of manufacturing States, and even the weather of election day seemed particularly suited to the McKinley side of the struggle. And yet the official returns, now nearly complete, show that the Republican plurality in Pennsylvania will be less than sixty-four thousand, while in 1888 it was 79,459.

There has been a Democratic gain of more than fifteen thousand votes.

Pennsylvania has felt the awakening, refreshing breath of the great Democratic cyclone.

The powerful influence of her vast protected industries has served to chain our state fast to the sinking Republican ship, but those influences can never again be so strongly exerted. The chains of plutocracy are broken. The purchase of the presidency and the passage of legislation bought and paid for is stopped. Unwarranted distrust of Democratic tariff reform and financiering is about to be replaced by confidence founded upon facts. Timid aversion to the loss of sheltering taxes is to give place to a spirit of bold commercial enterprise, as our industries realize that they have the strength of youth, not the weakness of infancy, the vigor of vast resources, not the feebleness of half nourished poverty. The day of awakening is at hand and Pennsylvania is stirring like a giant. It is well for us all to rejoice over the fair promise that our great commonwealth will in due time feel the influence of the political, industrial and commercial revolution and wheel into the front rank of Democratic states.—Lanc. Intel.

An Unmistakable Verdict.

As a condemnation of McKinleyism the recent election could not have been more pointed, emphatic and decisive. The tariff was the principal issue. In its national platform the Republican party endorsed the protection heresy without reservation. The platform committee of the Democratic national convention prepared a conservative tariff plank and endeavored to insert it in the party platform. It was Lawrence T. Neal, a Democrat from McKinley's state, who smashed that plank. He offered as a substitute a radical and straightforward resolution denouncing protection as a fraud and denying any authority in the constitution for the imposition of taxes by the government except to raise revenue.

By a vote that was almost unanimous the convention adopted the Neal substitute. It may therefore be said that the great issue of the campaign was framed in Ohio, and it is for that reason that the Ohio verdict is so vastly important. There was no side issues and no local complications. The question was fairly and squarely presented to the people. Governor McKinley pleaded his cause as earnestly and faithfully as any man ever advocated a political principle. He took the stump early in the campaign and he did not cease his labors until the night before the election. His arguments were answered in a way that cannot be misunderstood. His state repudiated them; his congressional district repudiated them; his own county repudiated them.

Never, says the Bedford Gazette, was a political issue more clearly defined and never was a popular decision more decidedly rendered. The Chinese tariff policy has been condemned by the American people. The Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue only has received the approval of the whole country.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES IN NEW YORK.—Under a law of the State of New York candidates at elections must file an account of their campaign expenses with the Secretary of State within ten days after election. The assistant district attorney has given it as his opinion that the presidential electors must comply with this requirement. Messrs. Harrison and Cleveland, not being candidates before the people nor voted for at the election, will of course not be required to make any such statement.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18, 1892.

Editor of Compiler: "President-elect Cleveland will not call an extra session of Congress, unless the Republican Senate shall at the coming session by hanging up or defeating some necessary appropriation or measure compel him to do so." The speaker of the above is a Democrat who took a prominent part in the campaign, and who has just returned from New York, where he had a number of conferences with the President-elect. He is opposed to an extra session of Congress, believing that it would be bad business as well as bad politics, as indeed do many other Democrats who were at first inclined to think it good policy to hold an extra session for tariff legislation. Unless the prominent Republicans who have turned up in Washington since the election are mistaken, an attempt is to be made in the Senate to make an extra session necessary by leaving undone things that ought to be done. This is not to be done openly, but by parliamentary chicanery, at which the Republican Senators are adepts.

Senator Carlisle, who is regarded by many as the next Secretary of State, thinks Mr. Cleveland's little speech at the banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce will have a happy effect in counteracting the causeless business scare which the Republicans are trying so hard to extend over the country. The sensible men of the country know full well that the prosperity of this country is in no danger at the hands of the Democratic party, but if they had been ever so uneasy these words from Democracy's chosen leader and President-elect would be sufficient to reassure them: "We are all interested as Americans in a common pursuit. Our purpose is, or ought to be, in our several spheres, to add to the general fund of national prosperity. From this fund we are all entitled to draw, perhaps not equally, but justly, each receiving a fair portion of individual prosperity. Let us avoid trampling on each other in our anxiety to be first in the distribution of shares, and let us not attempt to appropriate the share of others." Is this the language of a conspirator against his country's welfare, or of a patriotic citizen who believes in every man being given a chance to enjoy the greatest attainable prosperity?

Senator Carlisle, who only stopped in Washington a few hours, on his way to see his family, said of the extra session question: "It will depend upon conditions at this time undeveloped, and which only time will develop. If there is an extra session it will probably not meet until late in the fall. The tariff alone will not furnish sufficient reason for an extra session. The financial affairs of the Government may be such as to make an extra session imperative. It appears probable that we shall find that there is not enough money in the Treasury for the needs of the government. There is a situation in the Treasury which every thoughtful man who has considered the matter has long foreseen. There is an accumulation of deficiencies and obligations that have been contracted and will come over to us. It may be that this situation will furnish reason enough why an extra session should be called. We shall have to see what is done at this session of Congress. If the Sherman silver law be not repealed, and other action such as the situation demands taken we may be swamped. Upon these things depend the calling of an extra session."

Representative Wilson, of West Virginia, who presided over the convention which nominated Cleveland and Stevenson, and who has now gone to New York upon the invitation of Mr. Cleveland (may believe that he can have a place in the cabinet, if he desires it) is one of the strongest advocates for the holding of an extra session of Congress as soon as practicable after the inauguration, and following are his reasons: "The true worth and value of a tariff bill cannot be tested in a short time, and the first effects appear to be sometimes what they really are not. I think it would be most impolitic to place a new tariff bill before the country just previous to the elections of 1894. For this reason I favor the extra session idea and think the sooner the proposed tariff changes go into effect the better will the final result be for our party."

Democratic organizations intending to come to the inauguration would better "get a move" on their application for quarters or they may have to sleep in tents, so rapidly are rooms being already booked. The same chairman who made such a magnificent success of the first Cleveland inauguration has been put at the head of the citizen's inaugural committee and the preliminary arrangements are already well under way.

DEM.

Maine Men Talk.

Some of the Republican leaders, now that the election is over, are very frank in stating the cause of their defeat. Joe Manley, Republican national committeeman from Maine, Mr. Blaine's most intimate friend, said to a correspondent: "Three things beat us. First, the tariff. We did not keep the promises which we made to the country in 1888. We promised to revise the tariff. That meant revise down. Instead, we revised up and enacted the McKinley law. The people said in 1890 that they would not stand it, and they have said so again in 1892. A majority of the people of the United States have come to believe that the tariff is a moral question. When the people get that idea, no management on the part of the campaign committee can turn them. They will vote on what they consider to be the moral side. The second thing that beat us was the force bill. The third was——"

Here Mr. Manley stopped and smiled significantly. "You mean the candidate?"

"That is what I was about to say; but I won't. The truth is I don't know whether we could have won with any candidate this time. The people are bound to have a lower tariff law."

Congressman Charles A. Boutelle is even more frank than Mr. Manley. He talked with Senator Gorman in the Fifth Avenue hotel, and agreed with the senator that the present was one of the greatest uprisings of the people ever known. Said he also: "No one can justly claim that Grover Cleveland is not a strong man with the people. Nominated against the protest of the Democratic organization in his own state, he has received one of the greatest personal endorsements by the people of the country ever known. He has swept the country and is now by far the greatest man in it. With such a conservative and honest administration as I believe he will give the country, he will pass down in history as one of our greatest statesmen. I am obliged to admit this in all candor, although I am a Republican."

Triumphant Democracy.

The next President will be a Democrat.

Grover Cleveland is elected.

The people have triumphed over the Plutocracy. Men are stronger than money. The "hidden and abhorrent forces" of corruption have not prevailed over the intelligence and virtue of the voters.

The World told the protected monopolists and their political agents that money cannot stop a landslide nor block an avalanche.

The election has proved to be a landslide, an avalanche, a cyclone, a tidal-wave—everything that typifies irresistible power.

The overtaxed, insulted, defied people have risen in their might and overwhelmed the Republican party.

The voters have entered final judgment upon the verdict twice rendered by them in condemnation of the Republican policy and practices. The issues in a national election have never been more thoroughly debated or more generally understood. The will of the people must now become the law of the land. To defy them further, as the Republican Senate and Administration have done for two years past, would be moral treason.

It is a great victory, well and worthily won. The Democratic party displayed the courage of its convictions in its nomination for president. It wanted Grover Cleveland as its candidate and it nominated him. It believed in its principles and boldly declared them.

Courage and honesty have won. Long live the Republic!—World.

Democracy's Great Opportunity.

THE PRESIDENT ELECT DECLARES THAT IT'S CAMPAIGN, INSTEAD OF BEING CONCLUDED, IS JUST BEGUN—OBLIGATION TO THE PEOPLE—NECESSITY OF HARMONY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The address which President-elect Cleveland made at the dinner given to him at Sherry's by Mr. Henry Villard last night is regarded as one of the most patriotic and statesmanlike of the utterances of the Democratic leader. It is the first reference since the election Mr. Cleveland has made to the policy and duty of the Democratic party in view of the recent overwhelming victory at the polls. The address was as follows:

"Mr. Villard and Gentlemen: I find it impossible to rid myself at this moment of the conflicting emotions which stir within me. I see here assembled good and staunch friends who have labored incessantly and devotedly for the success which has crowned Democratic effort in the canvass just closed, and I cannot forget how greatly these efforts have been characterized by personal attachment and friendship for the candidates selected to carry the Democratic banner. This awakens a sense of gratitude which it is a great pleasure for me to thankfully acknowledge. I confess, too, that I have fully shared in the partisan satisfaction which our great victory is calculated to arouse in every heart as thoroughly Democratic as mine.

"It is seldom given to any man to contemplate such a splendid campaign, so masterfully arranged in his behalf by such good friends, followed by such a stupendous and complete triumph. I should not, perhaps, introduce anything sombre on this occasion, but I know you will forgive me when I say that every feeling of jubilation and even my sense of gratitude is so tempered as to be almost entirely obscured by a realization, nearly painful, of the responsibility I have assumed in the sight of the American people. My love of country, my attachment to the principles of true Democracy, my appreciation of the obligation I have entered into with the best and most confiding people in the world and a consciousness of my own weakness and imperfections, all conspire to fill my mind with sober and oppressing reflections.

"When I consider all we have to do as a party charged with the control of the government I feel that our campaign, instead of being concluded, is but just begun. What shall our performance be of the contract we have made with our countrymen, and how well shall we justify the trust they have reposed in us? If we see nothing in our victory but a license to revel in partisan spoils we shall fail at every point. If we merely profess to enter upon our work, and if we make apparent endeavor to do it as a cover for seeking partisan advantage, we shall invite contempt and disgrace.

"If we attempt to discharge our duty to the people without complete party harmony in patriotic action we shall demonstrate our incompetency. I thank God that far above all doubts and misgivings and away beyond all difficulties we may constantly see the lights of hope and safety. The light we see is the illumination from the principles of true, honest and pure Democracy—showing the way in all times of danger and leading us to the fulfillment of political duty and the redemption of all our pledges. This light is kindled in the love of justice and in devotion to the people's rights. It is bright in a constant patriotism and in a nation's promise. Let us not be misled to our undoing by other lights of false Democracy, which may be kindled in broken faith, and which, shining in hypocrisy, will, if followed, lure us to the rocks of failure and disgrace. If we see stearn labor ahead of us, and if difficulties loom up on our horizon, let us remember that in the thickest weather the mariner watches most anxiously for his true light.

"Who in our party charged with any responsibility to the people has not pledged his devotion to the principles of true Democracy, and who among us has made pledges with intent to deceive? I have faith in the manliness and truthfulness of the Democratic party.

"My belief in our principles and my faith in our party constitutes my trust that we shall answer the expectations of our countrymen and shall raise high aloft the standard of true Democracy, to fix the gaze for many years to come of a prosperous, a happy and a contented people."

Among the guests at the dinner were Messrs. William C. Whitney, Carl Schurz, Daniel S. Lamot, Josiah Quincy, Lawrence Godkin, Wayne MacVeagh, Don M. Dickinson, Calvin S. Brice, Oswald Ottendorfer, William R. Grace, William Steinway, William F. Harrity, Congressmen Wm. C. P. Breckinridge, Fitch and Warner.

WAGERED HER HAND ON THE ELECTION.—Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—Henry Rudolph, residing at Evanstown, has for several years sought the hand of Miss Lawrence, of the same place, but unsuccessfully. Just after the Chicago convention Miss Lawrence bet Rudolph that Cleveland would not win, the stake being her hand. Tuesday night Rudolph came to this city to get the returns. He was the most anxious man in town. When it became known that Cleveland had been elected he was wild. Yesterday morning he returned to Evanstown, brought Miss Lawrence to the city, and married her.

THE bound volume of Harper's Young People for 1892, which is just ready for publication, is fully equal to its predecessors in the beauty, value, and variety of its contents. Among its contributors are such well-known writers as W. D. Howells, Thomas Nelson Page, Captain Charles King, Kirk Munroe, Margaret E. Sangster, Howard Pyle, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Charles Carleton Coffin, and many others. The illustrations are numerous and beautiful. As a holiday gift-book for the boys and girls it is unsurpassed.

VILE and unworthy of consideration are nostrums of which it is asserted—and there are many such—that they cure immediately bodily ailments of long standing. There are none such that can. Chronic disorders cannot be instantaneously removed. Continuity in the use of a genuine medicine, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will eradicate chronic physical evils. Not the least of these last in the force of its opposition to medicine is constipation, to the removal of which, if persisted in, the Bitters is particularly adapted. Constriction of the bowels is a complaint which should be dealt with early and systematically. So are its usual attendants, liver complaint and dyspepsia. For these, for malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and more recently "la grippe, this high and professionally commended medicine is an undoubted specific. Nothing can exceed it, moreover, as a means of imparting strength to the feeble and nervous.

THE DOCTORS ARE GUILTY.—Grave mistakes are made by physicians in treating Heart Disease. The rate of sudden deaths is daily increasing. Hundreds become victims of the ignorance of physicians in the treatment of this disease. One in four persons has a diseased heart. Shortness of Breath, Palpitation and Fluttering, Irregular Pulse, Choking Sensation, Asthmatic Breathing, Pain or Tenderness in Side, Shoulder or Arm, Weak or Hungry Spells, are symptoms of Heart Disease. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Thousands testify to its wonderful cures. Books Free. Sold by John M. Huber. f

HOW A MOTHER SAVED HER BOY.—Little Robert Frey lives at Silver Lake; his mother and father love him with parental devotion; he is a bright little fellow. Bobby, as he is called, took a severe cold, which would not yield to everything they tried. A neighbor persuaded the use of Pan-Tina, the great remedy for Coughs, Colds and Consumption. The first few doses relieved and the contents of a 25-cent bottle made a cure. You can imagine the mother's joy. Pan-Tina is sold at A. D. Buehler & Co.'s Drug Store. (f)

Lay of the Thankful Hens.

From FARM-POULTRY, November, 1892.

When for no man an egg we lay,
How thankful we should be,
If three good meals we get each day,
How thankful we should be,
That on the day when all give thanks,
We're left to "dust" on sunny banks,
While the turkey's neck our master yanks,
How thankful we should be.

When we don't lay at this time of year,
How thankful we should be,
If our mistress says to her "It's clear,"
How thankful we should be.
"That she believes to make hens pay
In their morning mash most every day
She will put a powder to make them lay,"
How thankful we should be.

That she knows the best, and reason why,
How thankful we should be,
And on her judgment we rely,—
How thankful we should be,
For, "nothing on earth will Make Hens Lay
Like Sheridan's Powder"—by the way,—
If with us hens it's come to stay,
How thankful we should be.

So here's long life to Sheridan's Powder;
How thankful we should be;
If we could cackle it even louder
How thankful we should be.
That with a large one dollar can
We pleased the most exacting man,
As his egg-basket overran
How thankful we should be.

Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure. Highly concentrated. In quantity costs tenth of a cent a day. No other kind is like it. I. S. NOTES:

Directors wishing to attend any of the Evening Entertainments are invited to call at my office, in the Court-house, between the hours of 6 and 7 o'clock each evening during the week, where they can procure tickets.

Directors are urged, if in attendance at the Institute but half a day to report to the Secretary, who will record their names. They will be charged no enrollment fee.

All persons who having been formerly identified as teachers of the public schools, and who are not engaged in teaching at present, are invited to have their names enrolled as honorary members of the Institute. Enrolment fee, same as that of the teachers, $1.00.

Tickets for full course of Evening Lectures, $1.50. Single admission, 40 cents, including charges for reserved seats; without reserved seat, single admission 25 cents.

A diagram of the Court-room will be placed at Buehler's Book Store, Gettysburg. All desiring course tickets and reserved seats can secure them there after Wednesday, Nov. 16, 1892.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

Teachers and Directors wishing to attend the Institute will do well to note carefully the arrangements made for their benefit. Reductions of fare have been secured from the several railroads, as follows: Western Maryland, Philadelphia and Reading and East Berlin Branch. Excursion rates can be secured only on presentation of ticket orders to the ticket agents.

In applying for orders for excursion tickets, address the County Superintendent; please enclose stamp, and be careful to give the full name and address, stating clearly the number of orders needed and for whom, also the railroad and name of the station from which you start.

The tickets are good in going from Nov. 19th to the 26th inclusive, and return for the same time.

It is hoped that both teachers and directors, also friends of education, will avail themselves of this opportunity. Orders not used should be promptly returned. Address no later than Nov. 18th, 1892. J. W. THOMAN, co. supt.,

CHRISTY BREAD KNIFE.

THE WONDERFUL CHRISTY BREAD KNIFE
PATENTED NOV. 12TH 89 - OCT. 6TH 91.

Who has not been annoyed time and again in the attempt to cut bread with an ordinary knife?

The Christy Bread Knife is the best ever offered for sale, and the only one made that will cut bread perfectly.

It will cut hot bread as nicely as it will cold.

In cutting, place the loaf of bread upon a table or bread board, use the knife the same as you would a saw, pressing lightly, and it will not crumble the bread.

It is far superior to a smooth-edged knife in every respect.

The scalloped edge does not interfere with its being sharpened on a whetstone or steel, as you would an ordinary knife.

Having once used this knife you will never be without it It is indispensable to good housekeeping.

The steel handle will not soak off or get loose, and is very convenient for hanging up the knife.

To slice bread thin for making sandwiches it is perfection: you can cut thin slices just as well as you can thick ones.

If this knife is used only for the purpose for which it is intended it will retain its cutting edge perfectly for years.

Teachers' Institute.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AND INTERESTING EXERCISES.—SPECIAL REPORT.

The thirty-eighth annual session of the Adams County Teachers' Institute held in the Court-house at Gettysburg was convened and called to order by County Superintendent J. W. Thoman, yesterday afternoon.

Short devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. T. J. Barkley, who read a portion of the 91st Psalm and offered an eloquent and fervent prayer in behalf of the educational work of the State and for the success of the Teachers' Institute just assembled.

After the devotional exercises Prof. C. E. Leslie, the musical instructor for the week, was introduced. He made a few brief remarks in which he stated what he wished to accomplish during the week. He gave in very glowing words the value and importance of music, and the great necessity of its being universally taught in the common schools. He reseated the teachers with reference to musical harmony and requested that they occupy the same seats during the Institute. He also took up the elements or fundamental principles of music and very clearly defined and classified them.

County Superintendent Thoman then delivered in an eloquent manner, an address of greeting, in which he did not only credit to himself, but to the teachers of Adams county as well. In it he placed briefly before the Institute a retrospective view of the work that has been accomplished, and that which yet remains to be accomplished. He states that great has been the anxiety in the efforts made to formulate plans and means by which to place our schools upon a higher plain of efficiency and culture for fear of offering too many inlets for rebuke, and room for critics to proselyte.

In speaking of the increased State appropriation he says that he is pleased to report that Directors in many of the districts are availing themselves of that assistance and aid, and are applying it to its intended use, that of increasing the teachers' salaries and extending the school term. Notably he speaks of Littlestown, Gettysburg, East Berlin and York Springs as having made an increase in salary for their teachers. New and improved furniture has also been added, as well as aparatus, in many of the schools.

Another feature he referred to, which seemed to predominate throughout the length and breadth of the county, was that of placing the American flag on school-houses, and that the county can in no way show a better appreciation and repay the State for its increased appropriation than by inculcating and ingrafting into the minds of the boys and girls the germ of good citizenship.

The minutes of the last two sessions of previous institutes were read by the Secretary, which were approved as read. On motion it was resolved that the organization of the Institute be effected by a committee. The Chair then appointed the following committee: J. D. W. Deardorff, Emma H. Warren. Jennie Moul, E. G. Topper and D. A. March. While the committee were making the necessary arrangements in the jury room the Institute was entertained by Prof. Leslie, who, with the brief remarks he made, has gained the confidence of the teachers and credibly established his ability as an entertainer and musical instructor.

The committe on organization reported as follows: President, Prof. J. W. Thoman; Vice-Presidents, Prof. J. Dorsey Hunter and Thos. D. McCreary Esq; Secretary, Chas. H. Rebert; Assistant Secretaries, Miss Dora Gilbert and Prof. J. W. Shutt; Treasurer, Prof. J. W. Thoman; Enrolling Secretaries, Chas. W. Baker, E. Jacobs, S. A. Nagle; Auditors, D. P. Delap and S. A. Nagle.

S. Mc. Swope, Esq, next delivered the address of welcome, extending to the teachers of Adams county a royal reception and welcome in behalf of the citizens of Gettysburg. He remarked during the course of his address that Gettysburg was the home of Thaddeus Stevens, and that through his untiring efforts the public school system was largely brought about.

The address of welcome was followed by a responsitory address delivered by Prof. D. E. Robinson, of Littlestown, in behalf of the teachers and directors of the county, accepting the welcome and hospitality so generously extended by the citizens of Gettysburg.

C. M. Parker from Taylorville, Ill., was then introduced. Mr. Parker was very brief in his remarks and simply gave an outline of the work which he meant to do during the week, and read a few extracts from the School Journal of Illinois, concerning the importance of a course of study for the common schools. The paper entitled "The Coming Teacher," by Mr. E. E. Taylor, was omitted, as well as the discussions by Messrs. Ellis Cook and Jessie Heiges, for want of time.

County Superintendent Thoman then announced the following committees: Committee on Reception, C. A. Hartman, M. N. Whaler, Robert Stoltz; Usher Committee, Chas. P. Baker, Harry Joice, J. B. Berkheimer, H. E. Currens, E. T. Rhodes, H. F. Wills, M. O. Bream, M. A. Grove, Elmer Wabley, C. R. Appler, B G. Duncan, J. S. Bish, W. V. Neely, C. L. Kinneman, H. L. Harbaugh, C. H. Richter, Harry A. Bucher, J. H. Seasely, C. J. Palmer, Howard Slagle, B. W. Steinour, H. G. Shutt, F. P. Starry, E. L Grammar, E. W. Hartman and O. W. Gardner.

By motion the time for convening the Institute was fixed at 8 45 a. m. and 1.15 p. m. Dr. E. E White was next introduced who spoke concerning the cause why some teachers are a universal success and others an absolute failure.

After singing the first stanza of America with Miss Grace B. Drakeley from Chicago, at the piano the institute adjourned until 8 45 Tuesday morning.

EVENING.—Dr. E. E. White's lecture on the "Duty of the Hour," was an able and logical plea for universal education, urging its importance in enhancing the military, financial and intellectual strength of the nations.

THE Littlestown Council has passed an ordinance directing the railroad company to keep a flagman at the street crossing.

Jubilant Democracy.

We have been furnished with the following report of Littlestown's judilee:

The Democratic celebration which came off at Littlestown on Saturday evening last was a grand success. Charles H. Duttera was the chief marshall, with W. F. Rittase, Dr. E. K. Foreman, Charles H. Rebert, John A. Shorb, Rufus Hartman, James Cretin, Charles Sell, John H. Eline and Samuel A. Rebert as aids. The parade began at half past seven and consisted of about three hundred men on horses, and the same number in wagons and on foot. The Silver Run Band led off in their beautiful wagon and were followed by the Democratic Club of the same place numbering 50 men. About 40 mounted men came from Two Taverns, and 75 horsemen from Union township, in command of Wm. A. Sell, Esq., and Mr. Jacob Easley. The Littlestown Band had a conspicuous place in the line. Among the attractions were banners, flags and hundreds of torches. A wagon beautifully decorated and filled with pretty girls dressed in gay colors and liberty caps attracted much attention. A number of ladies were also on horseback. About 600 persons were in line, the pavements along the route of the parade were crowded with observers who responded to the glad shouts of the paraders and made the welkin ring with cheers for the Democracy. The town was never so gay with flags and bright with lights. Wherever the eye turned bright colors mingled with flowers and lights welcomed the joyous crowd. The houses were beautifully decorated and illuminated. The Democrats of Littlestown never had a better celebration, and while all contributed, especial credit is due to the party who had charge of the decorations and illumination of the parochial house and grounds which equaled in beauty anything of the kind seen in the city. The Central and National Hotels were ablaze with light from cellar to roof. The houses of H. A. Spalding, John W. Eline, Dr. S. B. Weaver and Rufus Hartman attracted general attention. The parade went out Frederick street and turned in the field of Hon. Wm. McSherry, whose residence and grounds were beautifully ornamented with wreathes, arches, flags and lights. A large picture of President Cleveland under a beautiful arch of pine and flowers over the entrance to the yard was much admired. The parade after taking in all the streets of the town returned to Centre Square, and after a few congratulatory and complimentary remarks by Wm. McSherry, Jr., Esq., dispersed.

AT NUNNEMAKER'S.—A large number of the citizens of Liberty and adjoining townships gathered last night at Longenecker's store to witness the pole-raising and to celebrate the Democratic victory. The pole is 82 feet high and was hoisted with the aid of a traction engine. After Mr. Longenecker had liberally satisfied the inner man, the meeting adjourned to the store and appropriate speeches were made by Messrs. Harry E Gettier, W. E. Ziegler, J. L. Williams and F. Hilton. The Emmitsburg band enlivened the evening with music. The jollification was an old-time Democratic one and everybody enjoyed themselves.

ON Thursday evening a delegation of 150 from this place, accompanied by the Grand Army Band, attended the Hanover parade, which was a grand success.

CASHTOWN AND McKNIGHTSTOWN.—The parade held at Cashtown and McKnightstown on Saturday was a grand and imposing affair. This locality has the reputation of being able to get up enthusiastic and pointed parades on occasions of National triumph and this one has been no exception. The line of march began at Flohr's church, from there to Cashtown, thence back to McKnightstown and there disbanding where a tall Cleveland and Stevenson pole had been raised in the afternoon, turnish by Mr. H. E. Riddlemoser.

Home Wedding.

On Thursday afternoon the residence of Mr. Wm. Wible, in Cumberland township, was the scene of a pleasant home wedding, with fully fifty guests present. The groom was Rev. Charles B. Etter, of Lehmaster's, Franklin county, Pa., the bride, Miss Cora B., only daughter of Mr. Wible. The bride was attired in cream silk trimmed with Chiffon lace, and carried Marchase Neil roses, the groom in customary black. Mr. Geo. Etter, brother of the groom, was groomsman, and Miss Annie Wirt, of Harrisburg, who wore white silk, was bridesmaid. Mr. R. C. Spangler rendered the wedding march and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. C. A. Hay, assisted by the Rev. Dr. M. Valentine, both of the Theological Seminary of this place. The bridal party left the same afternoon for Baltimore, Washington and other points. They will locate at Alliance, Ohio, where Mr. Etter has accepted a charge.

The young couple have the most hearty wishes of their host of friends for their future success and happiness, and we, who have been kindly remembered, extend best wishes for the future prosperity of our young friends.

Foot-Ball.

On Thursday the Gettysburg College eleven went to Carlisle and played a game with Dickinson. The play opened with the ball in Gettysburg's hands, but Dickinson played with vim, captured the ball and scored a touch-down; the goal was kicked. Another touch-down by Dickinson ended the first half. In the second half Gettysburg braced up and fine work was done on both sides, but the home eleven could not score and with a touch-down by Dickinson the point-getting ended. Dickinson scored 14 to Gettysburg 0. The attendance was rather small, and the ground in bad condition.

On Saturday the College team went to Emmitsburg to play Mt. St. Mary's. The first half was started, but, owning to disagreement, Mr. Kline, captain of the Gettysburg team, called his men off the field, and no score was made.

—In the start of the game Mr. Wm. Kump, of the visiting nine, had his collarbone broken. The fracture was adjusted by Dr. Scott, of this place.

THE Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of St. James Lutheran Church will celebrate their 4th anniversary on Sunday, Nov. 27th, at 7 p m. An interesting programme has been arranged. There will be addresses by Rev. P. H. Miller, of Westminster, Md., and Rev. Oscar G. Klinger. Everybody welcome.

At the last meeting of Council the Burgess was authrized to purchase 100 feet of stone crossing.

Mr. John Dittenhafer appeared before the Council with a petition asking for the opening of Berlin avenue from Golden Lane to Berlin road. Mr. Cook moved that Berlin street be ordained and opened to width of 40 feet from Carlisle street to the borough limits, and that Berlin avenue be ordained and that opened to the width of 40 feet from Golden Lane to Berlin street, agree to. The motion was referred to the ordinance committee with instructions to prepare an ordinance in accordance therewith; also to have the surveyor to make the measurements and a map of the said streets. The Council instructed the street commissioner to make a good and substantial crossing at Orange street.

The matter of fixing up the streets and roads was left in the hands of the street committee, with instructions to have a foot walk erected along Berlin road.

W. A. Staub, the borough police, resigned his office, to take effect at once. The Burgess was authorized to employ a police officer until Mr. Staubs successor shall be elected.

Rev. P. P. Hemler, of this place, bought a horse from the Kline Bros., of Lebanon, last week. He is a beautiful animal, guaranteed, and cost $250

The Rev. Hemler, it being the first anniversary of that gentleman's abode in the pastoral residence, was given a bountiful supply, of the substantial, which was welcomed in a few appropriate words, expressing his gratitude and appreciation of their kindness towards him.

The beautiful weather on Sunday was a subject of much comment. Everybody seemed to be enjoying it. O

SULLIVAN ON A RAMPAGE.—York, November 16.—Ex-Champion John L. Sullivan created quite an excitement here this evening. The big fighter was billed to appear at the York Opera House in his play, "The Man From Boston," and on his arrival at the depot was greeted by a big crowd of people. Sullivan was beastly drunk. He wanted to enter a cab to go to his hotel, but found an occupant there in the person of detective Samuel Wallick. Sullivan wanted the cab all to himself and and commanded the detective to vacate. To this Wallick objected and the prize-fighter got in and pulled him out, tore his coat badly and jostled the wearer about roughly. Wallick swore out a warrant for Sullivan's arrest on the charge of assault and battery, but the fighter's manager settled the case before Sullivan was arrested.

ON Wednesday, Lute Betty, colored, of this place, was out gunning and while on the land of Augustus Butler, colored, at the foot of the mountain, near town, was ordered to leave his premises, which he failed to do. Mr. Butler came to town and secured a warrent for his arrest, which was served by Constable Hann on Thursday morning, and Lute was taken before Justice Henry Stokes, for a hearing, but Lute submitted his case, and the Squire fined him five dollars and costs, for trespassing with dog and gun. This is a pretty expensive hunting expedition for Lute. We would suggest to our gunners the advisability of knowing upon whose grounds they are trespassing and when ordered to leave the premises to do so without arguing the question with the owner.—Emmitsburg Chronicle.

SUICIDE IN CUMBERLAND COUNTY.—Carlisle, Nov. 20.—George Walker, a prominent and highly esteemed citizen of Lisburn, this county, and who formerly resided at Camp Hill, was found dead in the hallway of his house at the former place this morning, having committed suicide by hanging. He had been in his usual health. When the family went to call him to breakfast this morning they were dumbfounded to find his lifeless body hanging from the balustrade of the stairway. The body was still warm, but life was extinct.

Investigation showed the most careful preparations for the deed. All his clothes were carefully arranged. A number of letters addressed to friends were lying near by and directions for his funeral were given

He first used chloroform, but that failed. He then sewed together some handkerchiefs for a rope and hung himself to the bedstead, but the weight of his body tore them He then went out into the yard and cut a piece of clothesline, and in the third attempt succeeded.

He was a man of the most exemplary life and was a brother of the late Lewis Walker, of Harrisburg. He was a native of Lisburn, and nearly all his life was spent in that place. A man of unquestioned honesty and integrity, he had been quite successful in business and for some years past lived retired. His wife died some years ago. He had never expressed any such purpose to his friends and it was evidently the result of temporary insanity.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE IN 1893.

It would be hard for a person who cares for good reading to make a better investment than a year's subscription to The Century Magazine. No region is too remote, no expense too great, if it will only produce what the Century's readers want. This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Budget, of London, says, "By far the best of the magazines, English or American.

The November number begins a new volume and contains the first chapters of a powerful novel of New York society, called "Sweet Bells Out of Tune," written by Mrs. Burton Harrison, the author of "The Anglomaniacs." In this story the fashionable wedding, the occupants of the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House, the "smart set" in the country house, are faithfully reflected, and the illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson, Life's well-known cartoonist, are as brilliant as the novel.

In this November number begins also a great series of papers on "The Bible and Science," opening with "Does the Bible contain Scientific Errors?" by Prof. Shields, of Princeton, who takes decided ground that the Bible does not contain scientific errors of any moment, and who most interestingly states the case from his point of view. Other articles in this series will include one in the December (Christmas) number, "The Effect of Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs."

An important series of letters that passed between General Sherman and his brother Senator John Sherman is also printed in November, which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers, including an article by James Russell Lowell, which was not quite completed at the time of his death. The suggestion which Bishop Potter makes in the November Century as to what could be done with the World's Fair if it were opened on Sunday, is one which seems the most practical solution of the problem yet offered

The December Century is to be a great Christmas number—full of Christmas stories, Christmas poems and Christmas pictures—and in it will begin the first chapters of a striking novel of life in Colorado, "Benefits Forgot," by Wolcott Balestier, who wrote "The Naulahka" with Rudyard Kipling.

Papers on good roads, the new educational methods, and city government are soon to come.

Four dollars will bring you this splendid magazine for one year, and certainly no cultivated home can afford to be without it. Subscribers can remit directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. They should begin with November, and so get first chapters of all the serials, including "Sweet Bells Out of Tune." n22

ST. NICHOLAS FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

John G. Whittier long ago wrote of St. Nicholas, "It is little to say of this magazine that it is the best children's periodical in the world." Edward Eggleston, the author of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," says of it, "There is not one of the numbers that does not stir the curiosity, inform the memory, stimulate thought and enlarge the range of the imagination." Founded in 1873, and from the first number edited by Mary Mapes Dodge, St. Nicholas is now entering upon its twentieth year. The most famous writers have contributed to its pages in the past, but never has its editor been able to offer a better program or a more distinguished list of contributors than for 1893.

There is to be a series of illustrated papers on "The Leading Cities of the United States,"—the story of each city told by a prominent resident. Edmund Clarence Stedman will write of New York; Thomas W. Higginson, of Boston; New Orleans will be described by George W. Cable, and Baltimore by President Gilman, of the Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Lyman Abbott will tell the story of Brooklyn, and other cities will be treated by other famous men. There will be articles on the World's Fair, and a number of pages of funny pictures and humorous verses.

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, the well-known author of "The Birds' Christmas Carol," etc., will contribute the leading serial for St. Nicholas during the coming year. The November number opens with a three-page poem by John G. Whittier, which has in it some of the most beautiful lines the good Quaker poet has ever written, describing the visit of a party of young girls to his home.

The School Journal says, "Place St. Nicholas in your household, and you need have no fears for the lessons taught your children." The magazine is the greatest aid that the teacher and the conscientious parent can possibly have. It entertains, and at the same time educates and instructs. The subscription price is $3 a year. Remittances may be made directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. n22

Farm Notes.

Gain the confidence of your horse and you will usually be safe in any emergency. You can only do this by self control. The man who cannot control himself can never control his horse.

Don't keep the mangers full of hay. It is relished best when put in fresh. If your straw is gone haul leaves or sawdust for bedding.

Put the bridle or the colt occasionally, and let him stand a few hours each day. It will make him pleasant to handle. If his mouth gets sore swab it with a solution of borax frequently.

The animals that require the least amount of grain during growth in proportion to their value are horses, cattle and sheep.

An uneasy animal does not grow well nor lay on fat.

Corn is the foundation food for meat and the dairy.

The first essential after milking is to cool the milk. This should be done immediately and as quickly as possible.

Make the change from green to dry food slowly, so that the cow will hardly feel the transition. Sudden and radical revolutions in diet are always to be deprecated.

The number that can fatten sheep well is less than those that care for them in general. Good feeders consider that it requires more skill to fatten sheep than hogs.

It is the regular feeding and keeping in a good condition all the year round that counts the most, not the spasmodic feeding every few weeks.

Light hogs prepared for early market often bring far more profit than if kept until later when prices are low because of the rush of fresh pork.

Whole wheat is better for fowls than corn. It does not make them so fat, and considering the number of eggs that can be secured by using it, is altogether a more economical food.

All hens that cannot be depended on as winter layers, or which are not needed as brooders, should be fattened and sold before cold weather. They will make way with grain rapidly after the green food is gone, and will return no profit.

Put some of the surplus manure on the meadows, hauling it out and spreading evenly through the fall and winter. Grass will run out rapidly if not fed. It pays just as well to fertilize it as it does to fertilize grain. Some men neglect this and then wonder that they get such poor crops, and conclude there is no profit in grass.

Poor weeds and useless fencing add considerably to the farmer's expenses. Help to improve the one and to lessen the other as much as possible.

Select out the largest and best grained wheat for seed. Not only will the larger grains sprout soonest, but they will send up the most thrifty and vigorous plants.

A Plea for Good Roads.

Professor Haupt says that a good average road, through a rolling country, should never cost more than $7,000 per mile, and frequently not over $2,000. And the expenditure pays. To pull one ton on macadam costs just one-half as much as on hard dirt, and one-fourth as much as on sand. It is estimated that in England improved roads have made it possible for three horses to do the work formerly done by four, thus saving $100,000,000 annually. It is also stated that with improved roads the farm produce of Illinois could be hauled for $15,000,000 per annum less than now, and that $160,000,000 would be added to the value of the farms.

Keeping Apples.

To preserve the freshness in apples and to prevent decay keep them uniformly cool—not more than two or three degrees above freezing. To effect this requirement various means are resorted to. One method strongly recommended and possessing much merit when it can be adopted, is to imbed them in perfectly dry sand by first covering the bottom of the barrel holding them with about two inches of the dry sand; on this carefully place a layer of apples; then alternately with sand and apples till within an inch or two of the top, and then finish with the sand. Probably baked or kiln dried sawdust would do nearly as well if of some wood like the sugar maple, which has no offensive odor. Pine sawdust spoils the flavor of the fruit. Sand, however, will fill better in the interstices of the apples. Country Gentleman, which is authority for the foregoing, says:

"We find no difficulty in keeping winter apples well into July, but none but good, well ripened, sound apples should be selected."

Do not forget to give the fattening hogs frequent liberal feeds of char coal. If this is not convenient a handful of wood ashes and sulphur mixed will be found very beneficial. As a rule pigs are confined to a corn diet when being pushed rapidly for slaughter. A constant full supply of this side food is just as liable to produce a disordered state of the stomach in them as the same course of eating would in human beings, and they need, for correctives, the articles mentioned above, just as their owners and feeders need "after-dinner" or "anti-bilious" pills.

GENERALLY speaking, the profit in keeping an animal decreases or wholly disappears shortly after the prime of life is passed. If kept long after this point is reached the profit that has accrued from feeding through the earlier stages may be easily lost. Farmers are not usually much given to sentiment in this matter, and do not retain animals after the period of profitable use is passed, from any especial affection, but simply because they do not recognize the fact that they are on the down grade. Go into the barns and fields of men who are thoroughly successful stock raisers and you will find mainly young animals, very rarely any that are much passed their prime.

KEEPING THE POULTRY HOUSE CLEAN.—There is no necessity for so much scraping and hard work as is often bestowed on the poultry house. The easiest way is to thoroughly clean the house; then keep it clean with a broom. This is done by sprinkling the floor an inch deep with dry earth; or chaff, plaster or sifted coal ashes may be used. The dry earth absorbs all moisture, prevents the droppings from adhering to the floor, renders the interior of the house more comfortable for the hens, is obnoxious to lice and enables the work of cleaning to be done in a few minutes. —Farm and Fireside.

THE cheerful live longest in years, and afterward in our regards. Cheerfulness is the offshoot of goodness.—Bovee.

Barrel Clothes-Hamper.

A very satisfactory receptacle for soiled clothes can be made by covering a barrel with what used to be called furniture calico, but is now sold under the name of comfortable print.

The barrels that pulverized sugar comes in are of good size for this purpose.

Carefully break off all nails that project, both on the inside and the outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth brown paper, or remnants of wall-paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper in. Measure four pieces of print the depth of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for the frill at the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top and gather like the bottom. Draw this cover over the barrel, even the fullness, and secure it in place with small tacks. Place a two-inch band of silesia around the top and bottom to hide the tacks.

Cover the lid of the barrel inside and out with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw thorough the hole in a medium sized spool and screwing it firmly in place. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the hamper.

This makes a neat and handy place to keep soiled articles, and each week, when they are removed, the hamper should be given a few hours' exposure to the sun and air.—Margaret Ryder, in Country Gentleman.

A Housekeeper Should Know

That salt should be eaten with nuts to aid digestion.

That a hot, strong lemonade taken at bed-time will break up a bad cold.

That rusty flatirons should be rubbed over with beeswax and lard.

That tough meat is made tender by lying a few minutes in vinegar water.

That a little soda water will relieve sick headache caused by indigestion.

That a cup of strong coffee will remove the odor of onions from the breath.

That a cup of hot water drank before meals will prevent nausea and dyspepsia.

That well-ventilated bedrooms will prevent morning headaches and lassitude.

That one in a faint should be laid flat on his back; then loosen his clothes and let him alone.

That a fever patients made cool and comfortable by frequent sponging off with soda water.

That cold tea should be saved for your vinegar barrel. It sours easily and gives color and flavor.

That to beat the whites of eggs quickly, add a pinch of salt. Salt cools, and cold eggs froth rapidly.

That the hair may be kept from falling out after illness by a frequent application to the scalp of sage tea.

That you can take out spots from wash goods by rubbing them with the yolk of eggs before washing.

That white spots upon varnished furniture will disappear if you hold a hot plate from the stove over them.

ALL THE FIXINGS.—Guest—"Bah! Is this filtered water?"

Chicago Waiter. "Yes, sir."

Guest. "Phew! Give me some unfiltered then."

Water (loudly to cook). "Glass of unfiltered water an' a spoon."

LITTLE DOT.—"I wonder why there isn't ever any spider webs in the corners of railroad cars?"

Little Dick.—"Spiders have eight eyes, an' I guess it's too much trouble to keep the cinders out."

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued a sumptuously illustrated work on Chicago and the Fair, by Julian Ralph, which they offer exclusively to new or renewing subscribers to Harper's Magazine, Harper's Weekly or Harper's Bazar at the cost of fifty cents in addition to the yearly subscription price of the periodical. The chapters embraced in the volume are the result of Mr. Ralph's special studies in Chicago, and are illustrated with seventy-three full-page pictures. The work has been approved by the Department of Publicity and Promotion of the World's Columbian Exposition.

A WELCOME VISITOR.—December makes the opening number of The new Peterson an illustrated magazine devoted solely to literature and art. The names of the editors are a host in themselves; they comprise Frank Lee Benedict, Howard Seely, Octave Thanet, and M. G. McClelland. Among the contributors are such names as E. E. Hale, T. W. Higginson, Hamlin Garland, Joseph Kirkland, John Vance Cheney, William Archer, Margaret Kent, Rebecca Harding Davis, Gertrude Atherton, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Charles W. Coleman—in short, the cream of the essayists, story-writers, and poets in the entire length and breadth of the country. The New Peterson will be the cheapest literary magazine in the world, yet the names quoted above form a guaranty that in every respect it will be the equal of the highest-priced literary monthlies. The December number is a warrant, too, that in the matter of illustrations, paper, typography, etc., it will prove a formidable rival to more expensive periodicals. "The Amateur's Camera," by Frances Stevens, is capitally written and gives a series of admirable photographs by some of our most distinguished amateur artists. "High Jinks at Eden," by Howard Seely, is decidedly the best Christmas story of the year. "Wrecked," by Minna Irving, illustrated, is one of that gifted poet's strongest lyrics. "Alfred Tennyson," by Charles Addison Mayhew, is beautifully illustrated and written. These are a few of the number's attractions—it must be seen to be appreciated. Our readers should not fail to send for it. Terms, $2 00 a year; $1.00 for six months. A sample number will be sent for five cents. Address THE PETERSON MAGAZINE Co., Philadelphia.

Would you rather buy lamp-chimneys, one a week the year round, or one that lasts till some accident breaks it?

Common glass may break or not the minute you light your lamp; if not, the first draft may break it; if not, it may break from a mere whim.

Tough glass chimneys, Macbeth's "Pearl-top" or "Pearl-glass," almost never break from heat, not one in a hundred.

Where can you get it? and what does it cost?

Your dealer knows where and how much. It costs more than common glass; and may be, he thinks tough glass isn't good for his business.

What is
CASTORIA
Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.
"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A FINE OPENING.
COAL AND LUMBER YARD
AT PRIVATE SALE.
THE undersigned offers at Private Sale his very desirable and old established business stand, on the northeast corner of Railroad and Stratton streets, Gettysburg, on easy and accommodating terms.
The lot fronts 120 feet on Stratton and runs back 162 feet to the Gas Company's lot. The improvements consist of an Office, Stabling, Large Lumber Sheds and Coal Bins, with Railroad Switch with all improvements necessary to carry on the business. This would also make a first-class location for the grain and produce business, the buildings being easily converted for that purpose. A strong never-failing spring of excellent soft water is on the premises. If desired, the purchaser can buy the coal and lumber now on hand at cost.
This is one of the best locations for business in town, and should command the attention of buyers. Persons wishing to view it will call at the premises. JACOB SHEADS.
